Dear Valued Member of the AMEB Community

The AMEB would like to advise you that the organisation has a new online learning partner, Web Ed Development (www.webeddev.com).

This partnership will create a new program that will enable you and your students to sit their AMEB written exams online.

We are very excited about this new development as students who have access to the internet will be able to sit their AMEB exams not just anywhere in Australia but anywhere in the world!

We will introduce the online exams for the 2010 academic year but prior to that we are going to carry out extensive testing nationally. The testing will run by invitation in the fourth term of this year and we will invite a wide range of the AMEB community to participate in these tests.

To ease the transition a period of cross over will occur so both traditional and online exams will be available.

The AMEB hopes the partnership will be the platform for more new media learning which is line with current trends and our new generation of students.

We will correspond with you regularly about our progress and key information you need to know to explain to your students.

A dedicated page on our website will be available soon and will answer any questions you might have and there will be a contact number for you to call with any queries in due course. At the current time we want you to know that Web Ed Development is AMEB's online learning partner and the online exams will be available next year.

If you have any questions about the new exams please call the Federal Office on 03 8660 5800 for more information.

Yours sincerely

Bernard Depasquale
General Manager Federal Office
